

TURKEY

AYDIN

- Aydın formerly named Güzelhisar and Tralles) is a city in and the seat of Aydın Province in Turkey's Aegean Region. The city is located at the heart of the lower valley of Büyük Menderes River (ancient Meander River) at a commanding position for the region extending from the uplands of the valley down to the seacoast.

From Space

From Space (Agean Region)

From Space (Aydın)

- Its population was 188337 in 2010.^[1] Aydın city is located along a region which was famous for its fertility and productivity since ancient times. Figs remain the province's best-known crop, although other agricultural products are also grown intensively and the city has some light industry.

Aydın- City

Aydın- City

Aydın- City

Aydın- City

- At the crossroads of a busy transport network of several types, a six-lane motorway connects Aydın to Izmir, Turkey's second portuary center in less than an hour, and in less still to the international Adnan Menderes Airport located along the road between the two cities. The region of Aydın also pioneered the introduction of railways into Turkey in the 19th century and still has the densest railroad network.

Aydın- Agriculture-Figs

Aydın- Agriculture- Olive

Aydın- Agriculture- Cotton

Aydın- Agriculture- Grapes

Aydın- Agriculture- Pomegranate

Aydın- Dydimia

Aydın- Dydima

-
- The province of Aydın is also where a number of internationally known historic sites and centers of tourism are concentrated.
 - The weather is hot in summer, and warm all year round.
 - Aydın also has the distinction of being the largest urban center in Turkey administered by a female mayor, Mrs. Özlem Çerçioğlu elected in 2009.

Aydın- Miletos

Aydın- Aphrodisias

Aydın- Aphrodisias

Aydın- Ephesus

Aydın- Ephesus

Aydın- Virgin Mary

Aydın- Virgin Mary

Aydın- Kuşadası

Aydın- Kuşadası

Aydın- Hierapolis

Aydın- Hierapolis

